

Call for Papers for Journal of Dialogue Studies Spring 2014, Volume 2, Number 1 Critiquing Dialogue Theories

The Journal of Dialogue Studies is a multidisciplinary, peer-reviewed academic journal published twice a year. It seeks to bring together a body of original scholarship on the theory and practice of dialogue for appraisal and discussion, and to help to establish Dialogue Studies as a distinct academic field. It publishes conceptual, research and/or case-based works on dialogue theory and practice, and papers that discuss wider social, cultural or political issues as these relate to the evaluation of dialogue.

The second issue, to be published in April 2014, will have a particular focus on the critical examination of key dialogue theories. While other papers within the general parameters of the Journal will be considered for this issue, the Editors would particularly like to invite papers which address critical/evaluative questions such as the following:

- Which dialogue theories are/have been most influential in practice?
- Do dialogue theories make sense in relation to relevant bodies of research and established theories?
- Do dialogue theories sufficiently take account of power imbalances?
- How far are dialogue theories relevant/useful to dialogue in practice?

For more information:

<http://www.dialoguesociety.org/publications/academia.html>

To contact us:

journal@dialoguesociety.org

Academic Editor:
Prof Paul Weller,
University of Derby

The Journal of Dialogue Studies is a peer-reviewed academic journal published biannually by the Institute for Dialogue Studies; a subsidiary body of the Dialogue Society

For editorial team and board please see website

Key dates

- Paper submission deadline:
7th Feb 2014
- Announcement of running order:
Early March 2014
- Publication of issue:
April 2014

INSTITUTE for
DIALOGUE
STUDIES